To enjoy life, one must be in good health, and to remain free from disease health, and to remain free from disease is the desire of all. Yet there are some ailments which do not interfere very much with the pleasures of life, and therefore are not diesded in consequence—nay, more, they are frequently treated with neglect, although unique instances. therefore are not dieaded in consequence —nay, more, they are frequently treated with neglect, although in many instances they are precursors of more serious distorders, which may in not a few cases have a fatal termination! How often, to the usual greetings which one friend exchanges with another, is the reply given: "Very well, thank you, except a little cold." A little cold, and yet how significant this may be! In how many cases do we find a "little cold," resembling a little seed, which may sooner or later develop into a mighty tree! A little cold neglected may, and frequently does, prove itself to be a thing not to be trifled with. Let me, then, pray my readers to remember that small beginnings in not a few instances have big ciding, and this especially where discase exists. Let us, then, consider what is a common cold.

In the first place, we must be pair double at this most a cold. In the first place, we must be pair double at this most a cold. In the first place, we must be para doncal, and affirm that it is not a cold at all. It is rather a heat, if I may so express myself, that is, it is a form of layer, but, of course, of a very mild type when it is uncomplicated by other incases. It is certainly in the majority of instances due to the effect of cold of instances due to the effect of cold playing upon some portion of the body, and reacting upon the mucous mem binne through the intervention of the nervous apparatus. What is called a cold, then, is in reality a fever, and, though in the majority of instances it is of such a trivial nature as to necessitate few precautions being taken during its attack, yet in some cases it runs a most attack, yet in some cases it runs a most acute course, and may be followed by creat prostration. Even when the premonitory symptoms of a cold are developing themselves, when for example, what is ing themselves, when, for example, what i medical man calls a rigor, or, as it is popularly designated a shivening is felt, when we would naturally suppose that the animal temperature is below par, it is at that very moment higher than the normal, thus showing the onset of level.
